Communities Join Flood Relief Aid

The deep distress of the flood suffers in the east and south has not moved only the cities to action, to render aid, but the rural sections are also as eager to help. This has been splendidly shown in the various villages in this section.

FRANKFORT MAYOR CALLS MASS MEETING

Mayor George Sangmeister of Frankfort called on the people of the village and rural districts to attend a mass meeting held in the parlors of the St. Peter's Evangelical church Tuesday evening at which time plans were formulated to raise funds for the unfortunates in the flood stricken area. This call was broadcast over radio station WCLS of Joliet Monday evening.

At this meeting which was well attended, the following committees were chosen: Central committee, Rev. G. Gerhold, president; Geo. C. Sangmeister, Secretary and Mrs. Geo. Andrew, treasurer.

Committees chosen for soliciting rural districts, of Frankfort: Geo. Heusner, Albert Jarchow, Herman Schoop, Edw. Vollrath, Ferdinand Scheer, Wm. Fredericks, Arthur Geuther, Christ Hohenstein, Edmond Ebert, Walter Minger and Harvey Spiess.

For Lincoln Estates, Ora Andrews and John Larson.

For village of Frankfort: Harry Balchowsky, Chas. Nordstrom, Chas. Bobzin, John Baumgartner, Mrs. Glenn Folkers and Alvin Hill.

A fund is to be collected by Friday evening and is to be turned over to the Red Cross. Another meeting will also be held Friday evening. The quota set by Frankfort people to be raised by them, is from $500 to $1000.00.

MOKENA SENDS MONEY AND CLOTHES

At Mokena the drive to help the needy in the flood zone was begun by Miss Christina Schmidt, local telephone operator who has been soliciting clothes which have been turned over to the Will County Chapter of the Red Cross.

Mrs. Anton Benson, local Red Cross chairman is also actively engaged in raising funds and collecting clothes. Subscription blanks also are being circulated by the business men for funds. Anyone wishing to contribute cash, can give it, either to Mrs. Benson, leave it with any of the business men or the Mokena State bank. Anyone wishing to donate clothing can do so by getting in touch with Mrs. Benson or Miss Schmidt.

A number of people have also made money contributions direct to the Chicago office of the Red Cross. At a meeting of the PTA Tuesday night $14.50 was raised for the flood relief fund. At the Father and Son banquet held in St. John's church in Mokena Wednesday night Richard Hensel, president of the Brotherhood made an appeal for funds for relief and a collection was taken which has been turned over to the Red Cross.

NEW LENOX OPENS RELIEF FUND DRIVE

At New Lenox, the business people have banded together and formed a local relief organization for the purpose of raising money and collecting clothing. Anyone wishing to give, can do so by leaving whatever their offering is, with any of the business places or by getting in touch with Mrs. Amos Bruns, the chairman of the local Red Cross.

MAKE RELIEF DRIVE BY PHONE AT ORLAND

Sunday Mrs. Sherman Knox, chairman of the local Red Cross Unit together with a committee of aids, opened a telephone call drive to raise funds for the flood relief. Geo. E. Gee, cashier of the Orland State Bank was named treasurer of the local fund. A goodly sum has been realized. Churches and the local school have also responded with good contributions.

TINLEY CONTRIBUTES CASH AND CLOTHING

In Tinley Park the business men and merchants are raising funds for the flood relief. Hundreds of dollars worth of merchandise has already been sent to the Salvation Army for distribution in areas where most needed and the Salvation Army has assured donors that their donations will be promptly dispatched to the flood zone.

The Tinley Park R. N. A. Camp at their installation of officers Tuesday night, raised $10 which has been turned over to the Red Cross.

Wednesday evening, Mrs. Omar Ebenhack, president of the Tinley Park Woman's Club, was appointed chairman of the Tinley Park Chapter of the Red Cross, by the Chicago office and she will gladly receive any donations of money and clothing for the flood relief.

The Tinley Park Woman's Club at their regular meeting Wednesday afternoon gave $11.44 for the flood relief.

The churches of Tinley Park are also aiding in raising relief funds. The crying need of the hour in

GAME LAW VIOLATOR GIVEN FINE OF $25

The pressure which Chief John Helenhouse of Orland Park brot on the game wardens of the Cook Co., to preserve to stop trappers from cutting open muskrat houses in the McGinnis slough near the village of Orland Park and setting traps in the houses, brought direct results last week. Last Tuesday evening, Peter Thonsulas, game warden of Harvey and connected with the Department of Conservation of the state of Illinois, arrested Tom Welbourne of Argo who had about 200 traps set for muskrats in the forest preserve at Orland Park.

The case came up for trial before Judge Louis Raschke of Orland Saturday morning. When the case was called there were a number of hot skirmishes between Chief John Helenhouse the complaining witness and the game warden and the defendant.

When questioned by Judge Raschke the defendant admitted he had been trapping around Orland for 29 years and that he had been violating the game laws for many years and he also admitted that he had been warned to stay out of the forest preserve but had paid no attention to the warnings.

He said he was out of work and had to do something for a living and asked Chief Helenhouse if he would deprive a man from making a living to which the latter replied he would under certain conditions and especially if a man was violating the law to make a living.

The defendant said he had a wife, two children and his parents to support. Chief Helenhouse then suggested he should try and get on relief if he was that hard up.

Following a recital by the game warden of the sections of the game code violated, Judge Raschke found the defendant guilty and assessed a fine of $25 and costs and warned him to stay away from the forest preserves with his traps and if he failed to do this and was brought in court again he would give him the limit of the law.

A large crowd of Orland people attended the trial. Chief Helenhouse has received many compliments on his victory and on his fight for law and order.

Rush Work On Frankfort Soy Bean Plant

From present indications, Frankfort will soon be a soy bean center.

An eastern organization which recently leased the old grain elevator along the E. J. & E. south of Frankfort, and also leased some land from the railroad, is now engaged in putting up a building 96 & 38 feet to be used in soy bean processing. A laboratory is being built and it is planned to extract oils, meals and other items from the soy beans, and conduct experimental work. The new plant will open within another month or so and expects to use about 600 bushels of soy beans per day and in order to maintain a supply, these beans will be purchased and delivered from farmers within a radius of fifty miles from Frankfort.

The elevator will be used as a storage house and has a capacity of 12,500 bushels.

The reason Frankfort was selected for this soy bean processing plant, is said to have been the cheaper freight rates offered by the J road and for the excellent freight service this railroad renders.

It is said the new plant will employ six or eight men for the present but if the manufacturing business develops into larger proportions, more men will undoubtedly be added to the plant's staff of employees.

Icy Windshield Causes Accident

While John Bormet of Tinley Park was driving on 159th street Sunday morning, the fine rain froze on his windshield, obscuring his vision and when he attempted to turn on 80th avenue, he failed to notice he was driving over the black line and an on coming car, driven by a man from Rockford, crashed into his car, head on.

Both cars were badly damaged and the wife of the Rockford man was injured as also was Mr. Bormet. The Rockford man was driving a 1936 Ford V8 which was badly damaged and was towed to the English Bros., garage in Tinley.

The flood regions is for money, clothes and bedding. If you have any old clothing or bedding to spare, it will help some suffer and homeless person. In making such donations, care should be exercised to send only such goods as are of service. In doing your part just stop and think how thankful we all should be that our homes have been spared and that we are not in the position of our less fortunate neighbors.

John E. Francis Decendent of Pioneer New Lenox Family Succumbs To Sudden Heart Attack

John Edward Francis, aged 68 years, prominent New Lenox stock man, and member of a famous family of pioneers of New Lenox and Will County, died suddenly Monday morning following a sudden heart attack. Mr. Francis was seized with the stroke while assisting his son John load hogs in a truck. Dr. Holt of New Lenox was summoned but death appeared to have been instant.

Mr. Francis was the son of the late John Francis former sheriff of Will County and was born in New Lenox township and resided here all his life.

Surviving are his widow, Adelene; one son, John, Jr., three daughters, Helen, Ann and Elizabeth; one brother Wilbur and one sister Miss Harriett Francis, all of New Lenox.

Funeral services were held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the M. E. church in New Lenox with the Rev. John Perrill, the pastor officiating. Interment was made in the family lot in Maplewood cemetery in New Lenox.

Judge Geo. Blatt Speaker At Father And Son Banquet

The Brotherhood of the St. John Evangelical church of Mokena sponsored a father and son banquet in the church parlors Wednesday evening. The banquet opened with several selections by a quartet consisting of Rev. Sigfried Recht of the Trinity Evang church of Chicago, Rev. Edwin Wahl of St. Peter Evang. church of Grant Park, Rev. Theo. Hafele of St. John church of Mokena and Attorney Paul Schlundt of Chicago.

The banquet dinner was served by the Radiant Workers Club to 225 guests. Following the banquet a very interesting program was given. Lawrence Kohl and Alvin Kohl presented several musical selections and the later sang a number of hill billy songs, made popular by the radio.

The speaker of the evening was Judge Geo. Blatt of the County Court of Will County. The Judge gave a very impressive address on the needs of the fathers to pal with their sons and to lead them in the right paths. He illustrated his talk with several delinquency cases which he handled in his court and showed that by taking the boys into his confidence and giving them rather advice, he was enabled to put them on the right track instead of sending them to the reform school which he characterized as a crime breeding place.

At the conclusion of Judge Blatt's address, Richard Hensel, president of the Brotherhood, asked that a collection be taken for the benefit of the flood relief and a total of $25.40 was realized.

Next in order was the showing of moving pictures. There were two comedy reels and a feature picture entitled "Evolution of Travel."

Two guests of honor from Indiana were present; Wm. Nill, Fire Chief of Hammond, Ind., and Rev. Schaefer, pastor of the Hammond, Ind., Emanuel Evangelical church.

Jury Returns Verdict of Accidental Death

Tuesday afternoon of this week at two o'clock an inquest was held in the Frankfort village hall in connection with the death of Raymond Mulcahy who was killed by an E. J. & E. train last Sunday night near Frankfort. The verdict of the jury was accidental death. The jury consisted of the following: Ora Andrews as foreman, Fred Hasenjaeger, Geo. Hansen, Edw. Follette, Albert Raven, J. G. Geuther, Sr., and two witnesses, who found the body of Mulcahy. They were Conrad Heisner, section foreman and Gilbert Schmuhl, a section man.

Find No Trace of Holdup Men

No trace whatsoever has been found of four hold up men who recently held up Albert Hentsch of Mokena on the Lincoln Highway east of Wolf Road and relieved him of $14 in cash. They threw his car keys in the grass alongside the road and it was two hours after the hold up, before Mr. Hentsch could notify the sheriff's office in Joliet.

Mokena and Tinley Teams Play Feb. 4

Two special outstanding basketball games are scheduled for Thursday February 4 at 7:30 p. m. in the Tinley Park school gym when the Tinley Park team will play the Mokena boys and girls teams in two games. All the basketball fans are extending a cordial invitation to attend.

A. W. MCGOVNEY FORMER MOKENA MAN DIES IN CAL.

Attorney Arthur W. McGovney, formerly of Mokena, died last Friday in Gardena, California at the age of 72 years. He was born in Mokena and attended school here. Later he graduated from the Northwestern Law School. He practiced law in Chicago for a number of years and after his marriage he located in Mokena and resided here until about 20 years ago when he removed to Gardena, California where he has since resided.

Arthur W. McGovney, son of Ozi and Tilda Jane McGovney was born in Mokena, 1865. He was united in marriage with Miss Grace W. Johnston June 23, 1900.

Surviving are two daughters, Jean and Janette, one son Hugh, one sister, Mrs. Jessie Vossberg.

Mrs. McGovney died some months ago.

H. F. Yunker Holding Sales

H. F. Yunker well known Orland stock man is holding community sales weekly in the Monee fair grounds. The first of these sales was held on Tuesday and was well attended. The next sale will be held Feb. 2nd and every Tuesday thereafter. Horses, cattle, pigs, farm machinery, etc., are being sold.

Orland To Protest Closing of Street By Wabash

Orland Park is putting up a strenuous fight to prevent the Wabash railroad from carrying out their efforts to close up the subway on Oak street. This subway has been used for many years and it is a vital part in connecting the east and west sides of Orland Park.

The Orland Park village board will be represented by their attorney A. H. Krusemark at the public hearing on the proposed closing of the subway to be held in the office of the Interstate Commerce Commission in Chicago Saturday morning, February 6 at 10:00 a. m.

Petitions are also being circulated in the village protesting against the proposed action of the railroad and it is expected that fully 100 per cent of the residents of the village will sign these petitions.

It is pointed out, that if the subway mentioned, should be closed, it would mean a great deal of inconvenience for the residents of Orland as only two grade crossings can be used and often these crossings are blocked by long freight trains from 5 to 20 minutes. In case of fire on the west side of the village, the fire truck would not be able to cross either crossing.

The south crossing located between two steep cuts is a very dangerous crossing as approaching trains cannot be seen until one is almost directly on the crossing. A flag man should be placed at this crossing right now.

The 143rd street crossing is also a dangerous one as trains cannot be placed at this crossing seen when one is approaching this crossing from the west due to a high embankment on the left side of 143rd street near the crossing and due to buildings on the right hand side of the street near the crossing. Altho a flasher is located at this crossing, this is not enough protection against the fast trains, both freight and passenger now being operated and a flagman or a gate should be placed at this crossing if the railroad insists on doing away with the subway.

It is also pointed out that there is a state law regulating the speed of trains thru villages and this may also be invoked against the railroad company if their plans to abrogate the subway.

Auto Destroyed By Fire In Woods Near New Lenox

On Monday evening about 9:40 o'clock, Miss Ruth Simmers of New Lenox discovered a burning auto in the woods north of New Lenox. She notified the Will County sheriff and several deputies were dispatched to investigate and found a new car completely destroyed by fire. The license plates on the machine were issued to Joseph Novak 1928 Homer street., but another set of plates in the back of the machine were issued to H. E. Sweiter, 506 S. Eastern Ave., Joliet who reported the theft of his car January 16.

FORMER MOKENA RESIDENT DIES IN CHICAGO

Martin Sandrock, former resident of Mokena, died Wednesday morning at 6:30 o'clock in Chicago following a lingering illness.

He was born in Chicago December 8, 1874. At the age of three years he came with his parents to Mokena where he resided for 59 years.

Surviving are two sisters, Mrs. R. Kluth and Mrs. Anna Mattes both of Chicago and one brother, Joseph of Three Rivers, Michigan.

Funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon in the St. John Evangelical church in Mokena at three o'clock. Burial will be in St. John cemetery.

Orland Conoco Dealer Wins Trip To Ponca City

Philip Burkhardt who operates a Conoco filling station at Wolf road and 159th street in Orland township, was awarded a trip with all expenses paid to Ponca City, Oklahoma as the guest of the Continental Oil Co., at a meeting of Conoco dealers held in the Morrison hotel last Thursday, based on his largest percentage of sales of Conoco oils and gasoline in 1936 in this section. At the banquet held in connection with the meeting mentioned were dealers from the south end of the state of Wisconsin and northern Illinois. A number of other Conoco dealers were also given a like award. The party will leave on the trip sometime in February.

Women's Union to Hold Oyster Supper

The third wheel of the Women's Union of the St. John's Evangelical church of Mokena are sponsoring an oyster supper Friday evening Feb. 5th in the church parlors. Preceding the supper a moving picture entitled "The Cricket on the Hearth" and also a comedy, will be shown beginning at 7:45. Sandwiches and cup cakes will be served for those not desiring the oysters.

Orland PTA Will Hold Card Party

The P.T.A. will sponsor a card party and bunco, Friday evening, February 5th, instead of play which was formerly announced for this date. Due to short time, the cast could not be gotten together.

The committee are as follows: Mrs. Wm. McAleer, chairman; Mesdames Uthe, Gee, Toune, Arnold, and Rust, assisting. This committee is very eager to raise funds for the general treasure, and are asking for the co-operation of all members and friends. There will be plenty of prizes and refreshments, also door prizes. So please set aside this date February 5th and help raise funds for your child and the community in general.

Ambitious Talent of Tinley Park and neighboring towns, ATTENTION

If you have talent and you enter your ambitions to develop your art, this announcement may be of interest to you.

Many a local boy or girl and even adult are artistically inclined and adept at some branch of art and music for which they have always cherished a secret ambition, but have never had an opportunity for expansion and expression.

In recent months various agencies throughout the country have recognized the vast amount of talent which lies dormant in every community. It only needs the stimulant of opportunity to awaken these treasures to a living and useful asset to the rest of the world.

Often a successful career in music, art or dramatics is brought to light and started on its way by the most trivial incident or insignificant opportunity.

Any activity which gives to persons of talent a chance to express their art in public and help to feed the flames of ambition, may be the starting point of a successful career.

With these principle in mind, the Tinley Park Businessmen's Association have instigated this movement.

A committee of qualified citizens for this particular kind of work is now being organized.

Men and women of Tinley Park and neighboring towns who have experience in dramatic and stage organization are needed for this work. If you are interested and can find pleasure in giving of your time and effort to such a cause, you will be most welcome.

Interview Mr. Gonia at the Tinley Park Drug Store or write to him within the next few days.

All persons of Tinley Park, neighboring towns and vicinities, young or old, who have talent and wish to find expression for it will fill in the application contained in this paper and mail it to Mr. Gonia. Do not make your application in person. Fill in the blank application and mail it in. This will be placed on file and you will be called for rehearsal and audition by our art directors.

If you sing, dance, play an instrument or study dramatic art of any kind, these stage appearances before the public under the supervision of experienced directors, will be of great benefit to you.

All talent applications must be sent in as soon as possible.

Men and women with experience and qualification for this work, please get in touch with Mr. Gonia at once.

We deeply feel such a movement to be of great public service. It will be of great benefit and lend encouragement to the youth of every community and provide splendid entertainment for the general public.

Refueling Furnace Fire Correct
Way Means Most Heat at Lowest Fuel Cost

THERE'S an art in refueling a furnace fire that enables you to get the most heat at the least cost. There's more to it than just scooping up a few shovelfuls of coal and tossing it into the firepot. The economical way is simple. Shake the grates gently when necessary. Don't do it vigorously and shake a lot of live coals into the ashpit. When you see a slight red glow in the ashpit, stop shaking. Then pull a mound of live coals from the rear to the front of the firebox, just inside the fire-door, using your shovel or a hoe. Don't disturb the ash under the live coals. That gives you a fire bed sloping down from the edge of the door to the rear.

Now, shovel a charge of fresh coal into the hollow toward the back of the furnace, being careful to leave a mound of live coals in front. These live coals ignite the gases rising from the contact of the fresh and hot coal, causing them to burn.

Finally, when these gases are thoroughly burned, clean the ashpit and reset the dampers. The turn damper in the smoke pipe, remember, should be nearly closed. The check damper should be entirely closed. The ashpit damper should be open. Open the slide in the firedoor only about the width of a wooden match.

Gas, Gas All the Time, Can't Eat or Sleep

"The gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart seemed to hurt. A friend suggested Adlerika. The first dose I took brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine and never feel better."—Mrs. J. S. Filler.

Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only. Adlerika gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that you would not believe was in your system and that has been causing gas pains, sour stomach, nervousness and headaches for months.

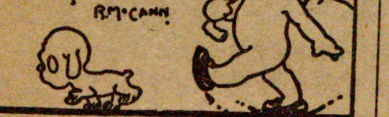

Dr. H. L. Shond, New York, reports "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika greatly reduces bacteria and colon bacilli." Give your bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and constipation. At all Leading Druggists.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

BILLY MINK IS DISCOVERED

AFTER the rats left the big barn Billy Mink found it less easy to get plenty to eat. There were mice in the big barn, and for several days Billy managed to catch enough of these to keep from going hungry. But mice can get into places too small for Billy to follow, and those that were left soon learned to keep out of his way.

Then, Billy's thoughts turned to the hens in the henhouse. He had not intended to kill any of those hens because he knew that as soon as he did, the farmer who owned them would hunt for him, and then he would have to move on. He was so comfortably located that he was not anxious to move on. But one must eat, and now that the rats had disappeared and the mice had learned to keep out of his way, Billy's thoughts turned to those hens.

It was the very night after the fire which the rats had started in the back shed of the farmhouse that Billy made up his mind to have a chicken dinner. He slipped under the henhouse and up through a hole in the corner which he already knew about. All the hens were roosting high fast asleep, with their heads under their wings.

Had Reddy Fox been in Billy Mink's place he would have been somewhat puzzled as to how he should catch one of those hens. But Billy wasn't puzzled. Not a bit of it. You see, Billy can climb almost like a squirrel. Reddy Fox would have had to jump, and probably would have awakened and frightened the whole flock. Billy Mink simply climbed up to one of the roosts, stole along it to the nearest hen, and with one quick snap of his stout little jaws he killed that hen without even waking her.

Now, had Billy's cousin, Shadow the Weasel, been in his place, he would have gone right on killing those hens from sheer love of killing. But Billy Mink killed that hen simply because he must have something to eat, and one hen was more than enough to furnish him a dinner. When he had finished his dinner he went back to his snug bed under the big woodpile.

Of course, when the farmer came out to feed the hens in the morning he discovered what had happened. He didn't know who had killed that hen, but he knew that it must have been some one very small to have got into the henhouse. He hunted about until he found the hole in the dark corner. He knew that that hole had been made by a rat, and at first he thought it must have been rats that killed that hen, and this increased his anger.

That afternoon he happened to look out of the barn door toward the woodpile and he was just in time to see a slim, brown form whisk out of sight under the wood.

"Ha, ha!" exclaimed the farmer. "Now I know who the thief is. There is a mink in that woodpile. He is the fellow who killed that hen last night. I think, Mr. Mink, we'll make

The Thumb of Intuitive Analysis.

With those who possess this gift, one is apt to pass by its identification, which is clearly given by the formation of the second, or middle joint of the thumb. This may be of average length or longer. But it is always marked by exceptional slenderness of its mid-section, which is sometimes abnormally tied-in or "corseted."

Coupled with a resolute first or nail joint, this type of thumb must be definitely placed as signifying analytical abilities which function at supernatural speed. The possessor may wonder quite as much as do you as to the source of his almost uncanny perceptions.

The Way of the Cross

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I THINK I had as much belief
As most men have who have no care,
And yet the Christ was never there
Until I was His kin in grief,
Until I had my cross to bear.

When I had only death to fear,
I think perhaps my faith sufficed;
But faith is not so cheaply
priced;
For they, who never shed a tear,
What know they, after all, of Christ?

Until I, too, was laden down
I think my faith was only dross.
I think a life all gain, all loss—
That not a soul shall wear the crown
Unless it first has borne the

ARE ALL MEN REALLY CREATED EQUAL?

WHEN the writers of the Declaration of Independence stated that "all men are created equal," they were not referring to intelligence or other forms of inherited ability, but meant that all people had the same right of freedom, and that the Colonists were equal in governing ability to their British ancestors and rulers. It would be ridiculous to say that all people are born with the same amount of physical energy, the same degree of intelligence, or the same economic and social propensities. Some people are born with a greater equipment for life than others, but we all have the right to live and make use of what native abilities we do have—this is the only sense in which we are all born equal, unless we add that the souls of men may be equal, but no one knows about this.

Lacy Squares Form a Spread or Scarf

Pattern 5695

In this pattern filet crochet, that favorite of the modern needlewoman, is adapted to two lovely squares—handsome used together—effective each used alone in cloth, bedspread or scarf. The lace stitch sets off the design in each square. String is the material used and you'll be delighted with the result. You can also use mercerized cotton to make the squares a smaller size. In pattern 5695 you will find instructions and charts for making the squares shown; an illustration of them and of the stitches needed; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 15 cents in stamps or coins (coins preferred) to The Sewing Circle Household Arts Dept., 259 W. Fourteenth St., New York, N. Y. Write plainly pattern number, your name and address.

Neglect of Self

The essence of true nobility is neglect of self. Let the thought of self pass in, and the beauty of a great action is gone, like the bloom from a soiled flower.—Froude.

Still Coughing?

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with anything less than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble to aid nature to soothe and heal the inflamed membranes as the germ-laden phlegm is loosened and expelled. Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, your druggist is authorized to guarantee Creomulsion and to refund your money if you are not satisfied with results from the very first bottle. Get Creomulsion right now. (Adv.)

WOMEN WHO HOLD THEIR MEN NEVER LET THEM KNOW

No matter how much your back aches and your nerves scream, your husband, because he is only a man, can never understand why you are so hard to live with one week in every month. Too often the honeymoon express is wrecked by the nagging tongue of a three-quarter wife. The wise woman never lets her husband know by outward sign that she is a victim of periodic pain.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

"Quotations"

Life as measured today is much too short for those who have work to do.—Dr. Serge Voronoff.

If I have a philosophy, it would resolve itself into an effort not to make anybody suffer unnecessarily.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The man who has not anything to boast of but his ancestors is like a potato—the only good belonging to him is underground.—Sir Thomas Overbury.

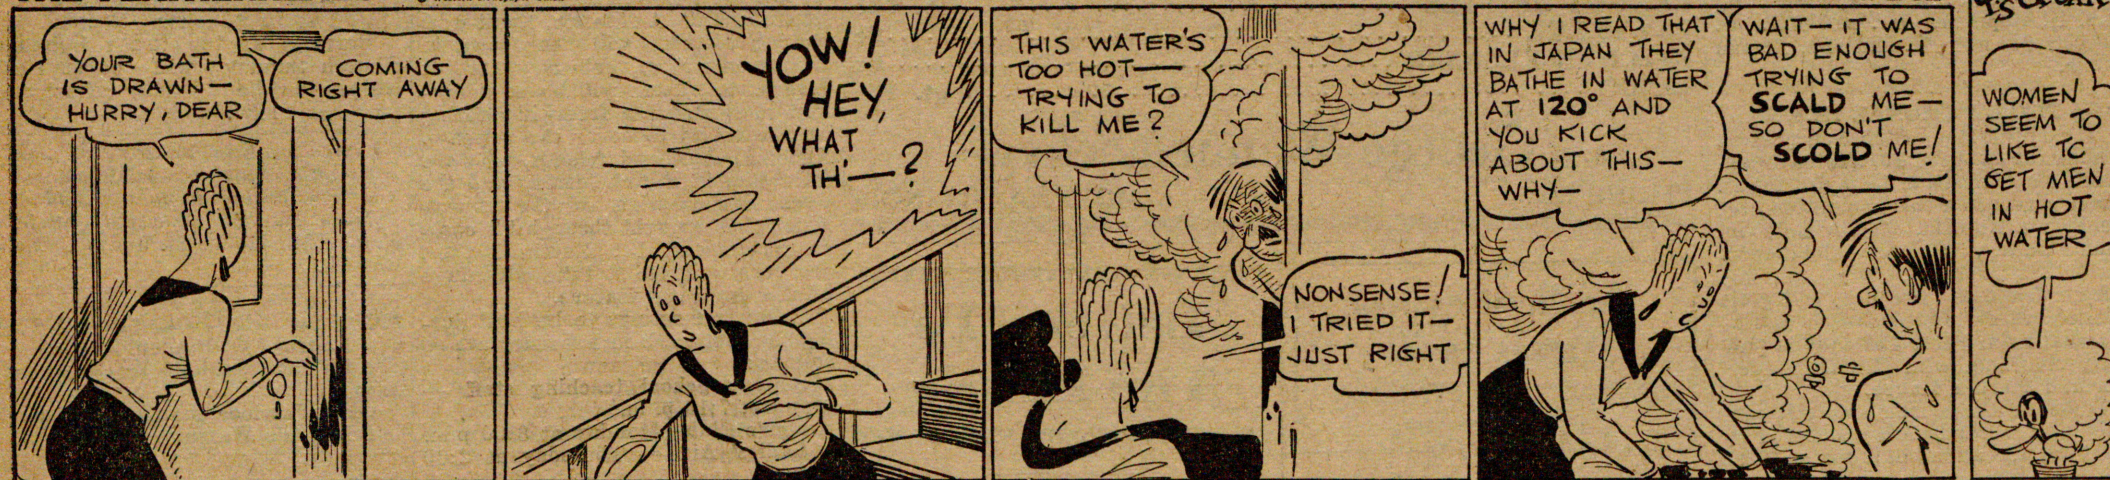

Peace rules the day, where reason rules the mind.—Collins.

The ladder of life is full of splinters, but they always prick the hardest when we're sliding down.—W. L. Brownell.

The Curse of Progress

Thespians

The class in public speaking was to give pantomimes that afternoon. One frosh got up when called on, went to the platform and stood perfectly still.

"Well," said the prof. after a minute's wait for something to happen. "What do you represent?"

"I'm imitating a man going up in an elevator," was the quick response.—Illinois Guardsman.

Conscience Hurts

Two men were seated in a crowded railroad car. One noticing that the other had his eyes closed, said: "Bill, are yer feelin' well?"

"I'm all right," said Bill, "but I do hate to see ladies standing."

She Knows

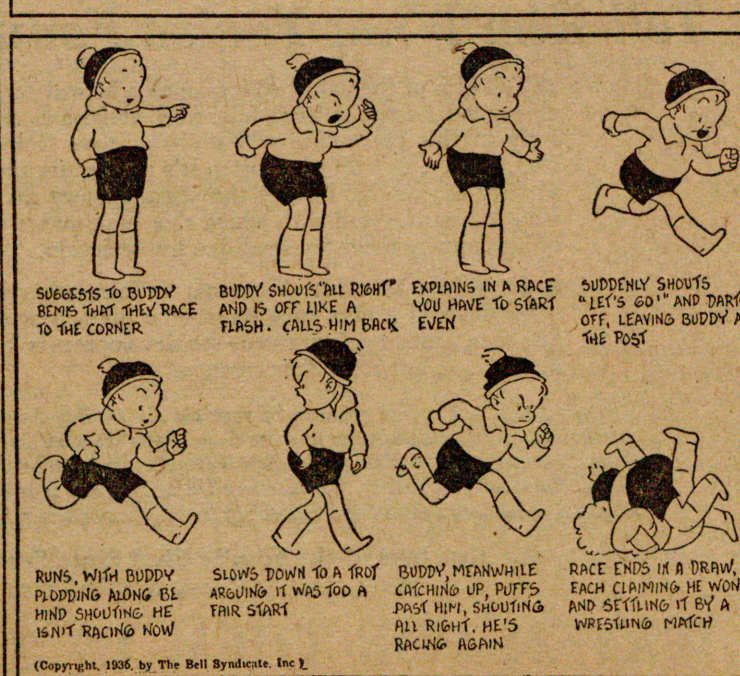

"Mummy, why must the orchestra eat in the interval?"

"I don't know what they do. Why do you ask?"

"Cos the program says that the second half of the concert will be played by a fuller orchestra."

The Merit System

Versus Spoils

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

Increased efficiency in all governmental activities.
Economy for the taxpayer.
Purposeful careers for public employees.
Elimination of the Spoils System.

These are a few of the goals sought by increasing numbers of taxpaying citizens who demand that the Civil Service or Merit System, now in partial effect, replace the Spoils System in all but the topmost federal jobs.

America can achieve these benefits if Congress does its part. The way is open.

A White House message has urged expansion of Civil Service to include all employees except Secretaries, Under-Secretaries and those in similar policy-making offices. Several members of Congress have introduced measures to hasten extension of the Merit System idea.

But will they be put into effect? That's a different question.

Heavy political barricades must first be overcome. For a complete application of the Merit System would strip politicians of their greatest asset—the control and doling out of jobs. Naturally many politicians will oppose it. Naturally they will fight any step which extends the policy of selecting public servants on the basis of how well they can do their work instead of the basis of how many votes they can deliver for the politicians on Election Day.

There stands the basic issue—whether the Federal payroll, which costs the taxpayers more than a billion dollars annually, shall be for the benefit of politicians who control appointments, or of the public who foot the bill.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Mr. Editor:

I am not the kind of a person who likes to run down a town but would like to say some facts for the good of Mokena. People who live in other towns make fun about us and say we are a bunch of hicks who don't have spirit and pride. What for instance are we doing for the young folks? What is there for the young people to do in Mokena?

Why don't we older people do something about this? Why don't we give the young folks some place where they can have good clean sport? What will give the good people a chance to have fun without going wrong and turning out to be good for nothing. My idea is to have the city fathers get their heads together and work out some plan to build maybe a public bowling alley or something else which boys and girls like. Maybe we could float a bond for the money. In time the place would pay for itself and Mokena could be proud of what it did for its citizens. This is only an idea which is worth thinking about. Maybe some body else has a better idea. Let them write to you, Mr. Editor, and say their ideas. We can print them for the people to think about. Maybe some good will come out of it. If it does we'll all get some good out of it and other people will not call us hicks anymore but wish they had some ideas about public spirit like we have. Hoping that other people will write to you about this. A CITIZEN.

P. S.—If the people of Mokena are not the hicks others say they are they will not let this idea die right away, but act.

FOR BEST RESULTS.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Truth" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, January 24.

The Golden Text was, "The Lord is good; his mercy is everlasting; and his truth endureth to all generations" (Psalms 100:5).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Among the gods there is none like unto thee, O Lord; neither are there any works like unto thy works. All nations whom thou hast made shall come and worship before thee, O Lord; and shall glorify thy name. For thou art great, and doest wondrous things: thou art God alone. Teach me thy way, O Lord; I will walk in thy truth" (Psalms 86:8-11).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Nothing is more antagonistic to Christian Science than a blind belief without understanding, for such a belief hides Truth, and builds on error" (p. 83).

Let's Get Together

By THE SCRIPTURE

How Did Christians Become Scattered?

"For thus saith the Lord God; behold, I, even I, will both search my sheep, and seek them out. As a shepherd seeketh out his flock in the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered; so will I seek out my sheep, and will deliver them out of all places where they have been scattered in the cloudy and dark day." (Ezek. 34:11-12.)

"For ye are yet carnal; for where as there is among you envying and strife and divisions, are ye not carnal, and walk as men?" (1Cor.3:3.)

Is It God's Will for His People To Be Divided?

"Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word; that they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me." (John 17:20

Fourth Annual Roosevelt Ball of South Cook Co.

The leading social event in south Cook county on Saturday night, Jan. 30, will be the fourth annual President's Birthday Ball to swell funds in the fight to reduce infantile paralysis in this nation.

Blue Island's Ball last year surpassed that of any previous years in brilliance and gaiety as well as receipts. This year with the same general chairman, Thomas J. Costello ably assisted by a large committee every effort is being made to outdo last year's gala affair.

Irene Hegner Jerstrom's orchestra, so entertaining and delightful last year has again been chosen. Also again—Wm. Lyholm has been given the task of decorating Masonic Temple—a task that he very ably superintended last year.

All organizations have been requested to mass their colors and to make a presentation at the function.

It is well to again emphasize that the BALL HAS NO POLITICAL SIGNIFICANCE WHATSOEVER as may well be noted by these general committees consisting as they do of people from various political, social and fraternal groups:

Ticket committee: Mrs. Robert Smith, Harvey Antilla and Miss Anna Mae Costello.

Hostess committee: Mrs. Allen B. Knirsch, Miss Helen Stoll, Mrs. Wm. Snyder, Mrs. J. Floyd Smith, Mrs. Robert Smith, Mrs. Chas. Kennedy, Miss Anna Mae Costello, Mrs. J. H. Young, Mrs. Edw. Groskopf and Miss Joan Barbour.

Advertising: John Harper, Ralph Sullivan.

Publicity: Hill Lakin, Roy Andrews and Clarence Den Herder. Floor: John Harper, J. H. Young, Herman Eberling and Wm. Lyholm.

Infantile paralysis, impetus of the nation's gigantic birthday party in honor of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, January 30, is not a new disease in the United States, although it is only in recent years it has been recognized for what it is, one of the most malevolent and mysterious ills to which the flesh is heir.

As plans go forward for more than 5,000 community celebrations to raise funds for the fight against the disease, a search of medical records here discloses that an obscure bone-setter, one Jacob Heine, wrote an article on it as early as 1840. However, little attention was paid to the paper in which Heine noted the results of the attacks of the scourge.

Another American, Chas. Fayette Taylor, was far ahead of his time in 1860 when he designed exercising machines and worked out a system for rebuilding the muscles of its victims.

About 1880 an epidemic of infantile paralysis broke out in Sweden. In following years depredations of the disease were noted by medicine in other parts of the world and science began its attack on this enemy of children.

The disease still completely defeats the men of the laboratories in their search for a method of control, but great progress in a well-directed attack has been made especially during the last few years, reports disclose.

Still Mad at Digest Says Congressman Chauncey Reed

They're Still Mad At The Literary Digest: A bill has recently been introduced which if enacted into law will provide that every letter, writing, circular, postcard, newspaper, pamphlet, book or other publication matter containing any matter relating to the conduct or operation of straw polls where candidate and issue are different, and employ sampling methods for general referendum purposes, and which measure the voting intention of the people for candidates for public office is non-mailable matter and cannot be conveyed in the mail or delivered by any post office or by any letter carrier; that whoever shall deposit anything declared by the said Act to be non-mailable matter in the mail shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both. We wonder what they will try to prohibit next. It is to be hoped that this bill will never be enacted into law as this great country of ours has not yet reached the stage where the people are not allowed to freely voice their opinions.

No More "Foreign" American Flags: A bill has been introduced in Congress and referred to the Committee on Ways and Means which has as its object the prohibiting of importation into the United States or any possessions thereof, American flags manufactured in any foreign country. It sounds like a good bill to us.

By Dolores Walsh

Following the regular weekly practice of the Junior choir of the M. E. church held Tuesday night in the Edward Seivert home, a celebration was held in honor of the birthdays of Mrs. Seivert and Mary Jane Gougar. Games were played after which refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bruns and children, Dolores and Billie, of Mokena, were dinner guests in the A. W. Walsh home Sunday.

At a meeting held last Tuesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Dorothy Osmus, Mrs. Amos Bruns was elected chairman of the New Lenox Unit of the Red Cross. Mrs. Abner Kercheval was chosen vice president and Mrs. Osmus, secretary and treasurer.

Ted Hobson is quite ill in his home.

James Murphy of Crete visited here with friends the past few days.

Mrs. James Tauber was hostess to the Afternoon pinocle club in her home Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Fox were Sunday dinner guests in the Walter Marshall home.

Mrs. Goldie Hobson did not attend the Afternoon Bunco club meeting in Chicago last Wednesday as was reported last week in this column.

Don't forget the 'Hill Billy' ball sponsored by the Men's Club of St. Jude's church to be held in the Colonial ballroom Friday Jan. 29.

Mr. and Mrs. George Woodcock entertained the WES 500 club in their home Saturday night. 500 was in play at three tables and prizes were awarded to Mrs. Lucille Drake, August Pieper, Mrs. Minnie Pieper and Frank Vally. A traveling prize was also awarded to Mrs. Drake. Refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. Drake will receive the club in two weeks.

The Maple Street Arbor, Ancient Order of Gleaners will sponsor a dance in the Colonial ballroom Friday night February 27th.

Mrs. Sara Roswell is visiting in Manhattan with her sister, Mrs. Bessie Woodward.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Roswell and Ted Roswell were guests Sunday in the Geo. Paul home in Manhattan.

Shirley Quinn who is attending school in Chicago spent the past week end here with her mother.

The New Lenox Band Parent's Association will sponsor a dance in the Colonial ballroom Friday Feb. 12.

A meeting was held last Friday night in the Glenn Petersen garage in Marley for all New Lenox and Homer Township farmers. This meeting was held for the purpose of introducing the 'Soil Conservation Farm Program'.

An election of officers was held and the following were elected: President, Joseph Kestle; Vice President, Frank Loucks; Committeemen, Frank Storms and John Francis.

Moving pictures were shown by Leonard Braham, Farm Advisor. Baron Gasskill, chairman of the Soil Conservation Program was the speaker of the evening.

Around the Town New Lenox

Everyone seemed to enjoy "Paty C's" singing Sunday nite. Especially his favorite, "That Old Irish Mother of Mine."

D. C. seems to go for Rabbit hunting in a big way. The new job will sort of knock that now, won't it?

G. S. and A. L. must be getting it bad. Seems they go to the snow a lot together now.

The gals about town sort of think L. K. is a very nice looking young man.

E. O'D's eyes must be receiving him—occasionally he tries to walk thru the door without opening it first.

We hear E. M. fell heir to a new name. It's "Fluffy" now. Cute, eh wot?

F. R. and L. A. sort of went for the floor show they saw Saturday nite.

Was B. W. ever proud of her date Wednesday nite.

H. S. sure goes for Chile.

E. G. and B. K. are hitting off fine now. We think it will be wedding bells soon.

Diamond was sick when "Yimmie" came up to see her last week end. But she claimed it was worth staying home from that dance so long as she was able to go to the party Wednesday nite.

Nations of World Allot Year 1939 To New York Fair

World Exposition Already Growing Up; Seeks Active Participation of State

NEW YORK, (Special).—The New York World's Fair, in which every state in the nation must inevitably take small or prominent part, is out of its infancy.

Preparatory construction goes on night and day at the Flushing Meadow Site of 121½ acres at the geographical center of New York City. A steady flow of activities and announcements emanates from the Fair Corporation headquarters on four floors of the Empire State building. Judging from all of these, the Fair is a busy, growing institution that will reach full maturity—no question about it—by the scheduled opening day, April 30, 1939.

The task of grading the site is about half completed. Battalions of men with trucks have already moved over 3,000,000 cubic yards of dry fill in the process of turning the waste marsh land, of the Flushing River basin into park ground. Other battalions are scooping out "meadow mat" for use as fertile top soil for the made lands, and in so doing excavate the beds for the two large lagoons featured in plans for the Fair.

The first of the 300 structures which, according to estimates, will house the 1939 Fair, has been completed and is ready for occupancy. This is the headquarters building for the field forces of today and the employment department of the exposition period.

Scheduled for early in the new year is the start of actual construction of the $900,000 Administration building. The designs for this structure, let under architectural contract a few weeks ago, are nearing the day of their approval in the Corporation's offices. Upon completion of this building, later in August, 1937, the Fair headquarters, bag, baggage and sales offices, moves to the exposition site.

"The most splendid and significant edifice projected for the 1939 international exposition," the Theme building, as described at Fair headquarters, is also well along in its contractual period. The estimated cost of this great building for the "Thematic Centre" of the exposition is set at $1,200,000. The preliminary designs are to be finished in about eight weeks and the final plans submitted within four weeks thereafter. Construction is scheduled to start immediately the designs are completed.

From this Theme centre will radiate all that is to be the 1939 Fair as conceived by its founders and rendered into concrete terminology and model by the Fair's Board of Design.

"Our job from now on is to give physical expression to the plan and theme of the Fair as announced and as set down on paper in our headquarters," says Grover Whalen, President of the Fair Corporation.

"Starting next April 1, we plan to complete the design of one major building every ten days for a period of seven months. In all, we expect to design no less than 30 major buildings to house the exhibits from every part of the world. Some 300 structures, in all, are planned for the Flushing Meadow site, within a few minutes' ride from Manhattan."

Without solicitation on the part of the Fair, more than 250 American business houses and institutions have begun preliminary conversations regarding their participation and are already planning exhibits. Five of the great nations of the world have already assured the Corporation that they would erect their own buildings, while no less than 32 other nations have informally indicated their desire to participate.

And then, on top of all this display of keen interest, comes the announcement that the International Convention Bureau, meeting in Paris, has allocated the year 1939 to the New York Fair. This means that the New York Fair has exclusive ranking as the "one international exposition" of 1939, and assures it of the active support of the 21 nations signing the agreement.

President Roosevelt has just extended official invitation to the nations of the world. Governor Herbert H. Lehman, of the host State of New York, has extended invitation to the governors and residents of 47 states. Grover Whalen, likewise, has invited the governors in a letter pointing out that "the commercial consequences of the New York World's Fair are so great and important that they alone would justify the active participation of every state."

Fair Commissioners are already in South America and Europe. Still others are on their way to the Far East and other foreign shores. Major Dennis E. Nolan, retired, as head of the Department of Foreign, State and Municipal Participation, will himself make representation to the governors and legislatures of the various states.

Meanwhile, under the direction of Harvey D. Gibson, President of the Manufacturers Trust Company, and Richard Whitney, former president of the New York Stock Exchange, the prominent figures in the financial capital conducted a 28-day campaign to sell $27,829,500 in debenture bonds of the Fair to finance the construction period.

Every confidence is being expressed that the Fair not only will "pay its way," but that it will bring a billion dollars more of revenue into Greater New York and stimulate American industry in general to an extent many fold that amount.

The total cost of producing New York's Fair, including collateral improvements, is set at $125,000,000. Statisticians estimate that the attendance will total more than 50,000,000 persons.

The City of New York, the State of New York, and the Government of the United States, according to expectations, will account for $35,000,000 of the total expenditures and thus lend an official backing never before achieved.

The first mention of the name Berlin in recorded history dates in the year 1244.

Prosperity in Hawaii

Under the Roosevelt administration not growing sugar cane was a profitable occupation in Hawaii. Large checks were sent to 39 plantation corporations, one of which received a total of $1,022,000.

General Motors Statement on Strike

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., President of General Motors Corporation, has issued the following statement:

General Motors has only one desire in this situation. We are eager to return our 185,000 employees to work as quickly as possible. We are convinced, and the facts show, that most of them wish to get back to work.

The obstacle to peaceful settlement is the unlawful occupation of our plants by sit-down strikers who have no right, in law or reason, to hold possession of them. General Motors is willing to bargain collectively when it receives back its plants.

At Gov. Murphy's request, we went to Lansing and agreed to begin bargaining. The union agreed to vacate the plants. We have lived up to our word to the Governor. The union has violated its word. They made charges which have no basis in fact in an attempt to justify their own violation of the Lansing agreement.

The statement made by the union leader in Washington yesterday, clearly indicates that the strikers are acting under his orders. His statement also indicates clearly his determined will to dominate the industry and its workers by illegality and force.

The strikes were called in the beginning without any attempt, on the part of the union, to bargain collectively. We agreed to bargain with the union as soon as the sit-downers quit the plants. We imposed no conditions on the union whatsoever. We stated that, during negotiations, we would not attempt to operate struck plants, or to remove from them, any dies, tools, machinery or equipment.

In the interest of getting our people back to work, without precipitancy and violence, and in the interest of bargaining, General Motors was willing, while there was hope of bargaining, to do anything reasonable.

We agreed to discuss the union's demands in a general conference with our executives.

We agreed to meet with the union leaders at Lansing, to arrange terms on which bargaining should begin.

We agreed not to try to operate struck plants while negotiations were on.

We agreed to go to Washington to cooperate with federal and state officials in their efforts over the last two days, to reach a basis of negotiations.

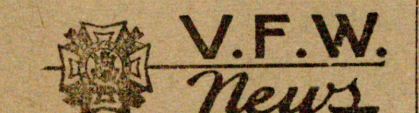

In the face of this willingness of ours to do everything to make possible a negotiation on the basis of reason, the union persists in its unlawful possession of our plants.

The present dead lock cannot go on indefinitely. Our men wish to work. They are prevented by a group of sit-down strikers and their leaders, who are willing to jeopardize the country's recovery, in order to impose dictatorship on our industry and on our people.

Our duty is plain. We have a responsibility to our employees. This strike is costing the employees of General Motors a million dollars a day, in wages. Our duty to them is to do everything possible to save them from further loss of income and from being thrown on relief.

The situation must be solved and I am sure that a way will be found to solve it fundamentally in the near future. In the mean time, so far as our ability to carry inventory will permit, every effort will be made to afford as much work as possible to our employees who are out of work through no fault of their own.

Mr. Knudsen has returned to Detroit to see how far he can put this policy into effect.

MANY TYPES OF HELP FOR VETERANS IN NEED

Every ex-service man sooner or later will require the help or advice of a veteran organization. This organization stands ready to provide for all veterans of all wars.

"What do I get out of it?" is the question that is frequently asked by the veteran invited to join any ex-service man's organization. The reply—a problem that often puzzles the general public as well as the veteran who has never affiliated himself with a veteran organization—is very simple.

In addition to the comradeship he enjoys by mingling with the men with whom he served, every member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars is secure in the knowledge that his loved ones will be cared for in the event of an emergency that makes it impossible for him to carry on. Our VFW National Home at Eaton Rapids, Mich., with its approximately 200 orphans and widows is a growing monument to our program of child welfare and the responsibility we assume for his dependents as his comrades.

Aside from these benefits, the Veterans of Foreign Wars maintains a national service bureau at Washington, D. C., and the facilities of this bureau are constantly available to the members of our ex-service men at large. Working in conjunction with this service bureau that is always ready to assist a disabled and needy comrade. The service officer of our post can be of distinct help to the average veteran in dozens of different ways.

MOKENA

Mr. and Mrs. Stokes Nebeker entertained Mr. and Mrs. Paul Meyers and twelve other friends from Chicago at a buffet dinner in their home Sunday.

The children of Mr. and Mrs. F. Werner are ill with colds.

Relatives and friends of Miss Amelia Duncan of Mokena extend congratulations to her on her coming eighty-fifth birthday on February 3rd and wish her good health and happiness.

The birthdays of Albert Cappel and his brother Emil were celebrated Saturday evening in the former's home. Those present were the immediate members of these families. An enjoyable evening was spent after which an oyster supper was served.

The Young People's Bridge Club met in the home of Edwin Yunker last Friday for a very enjoyable evening. High prizes went to Gertrude Sippel and Erwin McGovney. Consolation to Margaret Krusemark and Ellsworth McGovney. At midnight a delicious luncheon was served.

The Mokena PTA observed Dad's night Tuesday night and a collection for flood relief was taken and netted $14.50.

The village board meets next Tuesday night.

The Valentine dance which the Mokena Band Association was going to sponsor has been postponed until further notice.

The town girls basketball team wishes to thank the Mokena business men for the suits the latter have presented them with.

SCHOOL NEWS

Primary Room—The Sox beat the Cubs 1—0 in the baseball spelling game in the 3rd room.

Intermediate Room—the pupils made some very attractive out designs which are on display in their room.

During the last half hour on Friday afternoon there is to be a spelling contest, the winners will be announced next week.

Jr. High Room—Ruth Lowe and Frederick Whitlark have returned to school after an absence, due to colds.

The seventh and eighth grades are beginning the study of Civics.

Kenneth Benson is absent from school because of a fractured bone in his leg.

Elsworth McGovney was a visitor in the Jr. High room Tuesday afternoon.

The sixth grade have some fine drawings of feudal castles on display in the Jr. High room.

High School Room—Last week the Freshmen and Sophomores listened to the program of Julius Caesar which was very interesting.

The Sophomores listened to the Inauguration of President Roosevelt Wednesday morning in the Jr. High room.

The Freshmen have been studying Safety First and have made posters. The Sophomores are beginning the study of Zoology and are very interested in it.

Mr. Pryan principal of school at Matteson, Ill., and Miss Maloney, a high school teacher in the same school, visited the Mokena High school last Thursday morning. They observed Mr. Dunn's Algebra classes and Miss Leak's English and History classes.

Mr. Pryan spent an hour talking shop with Mr. Dunn and in looking over the school building. Both visitors seemed favorably impressed with the school system and building.

The High school and Grade school played in the tournament which was played at Crete. The high school lost by 32 to 18 and the grade school lost by 28 to 13. We both had hard teams to fight.

There were four games of basketball last Friday. The Frankfort light weights and heavy weights played Mokena light weights and heavy weights. The third game was between the Frankfort girls and the Mokena girls. And the fourth game was between the Mokena town girls and the Rockdale girls.

The Frankfort band played several numbers between halves of the games. The Mokena high school boys sold candy and popcorn and was a big success.

The games won as follows: Frankfort Light's 23; Mokena Lights, 14. Mokena Heavies, 13; Frankfort Heavies, 19. Mokena Girls, 2; Frankfort Girls, 12. Mokena Town-girls, 0; Rockdale, 20.

Don't forget to come out and see the Mokena grades and the High school against the Mokena High school and grade. There will be 3 games. The third will be played between the Mokena Town girls and the Tinley Park girls.

First game called at 7:30 Friday January 29.

Fourteen New Tax Laws

The Roosevelt administration has passed fourteen new tax laws. Under them the poor man pays, but does not know it. They account for the higher living costs.

The following information, describes the various types of veteran service the VFW is prepared to render:

Prosecution of compensation and insurance and bonus application. Prosecution of appeal in behalf of compensation and other claims before the Veterans Administration. Obtaining hospitalization and medical treatment for the veterans of all wars.

Reinstatement of veterans in civil service employment; securing headstones for graves of deceased veterans; prosecuting naturalization papers and many other forms or service.

Pastor Says Prayer and Bible Are In Discard

Prayer as a deterrent to crime and anti-social tendencies was recommended by Dr. Walter A. Maier, Ph. D., of Concordia Seminary, broadcasting Sunday, January 24th on the coast to coast Lutheran Hour Network.

"If the average American prays with the same frequency to which a group of Long Island commuters recently confessed, he prays once or less a day," Dr. Maier declared. "If the average Christian home joins in family worship as irregularly as a survey of selected Protestant homes showed a short time ago, family prayers are following the old family Bible into the discard. If our children are taught the same indifference and hostility to prayer that is intentionally inculcated by some radical and atheistic parents, we may anticipate an increasingly pagan, prayerless generation in this country."

"We have neglected prayer and we are now paying the destructive price of this fatal heedlessness. Alarmed by startling crime figures, we have hastily instituted crime study and anti crime crusades. We have special committees for the reform of criminal jurisprudence."

Experts have examined cranial bumps and glands and adenoids. They survey neighborhoods and disquiet environments. They study home conditions and heredity. They scrutinize diet; conduct blood tests; intelligence tests and social tests; invent lie detectors. Yet with the hundreds of millions that have been spent in following their prescriptions, our state and federal penitentiaries almost bulge with our increasing criminal population. How much of this sin, the agony of this crime and these wasted moneys could have been spared if the fear of God and the love of Christ had been put into the hearts of these outlaws, if they had learned and applied the power that prayer exerts for honesty and decency?"

A plea for intellectual security and the assurance that higher education will not degenerate into atheism was voiced recently by Dr. Walter A. Maier, Ph. D., in an address on the Lutheran Hour over a Mutual Broadcasting System network.

"We have too many high school teachers who have only sipped at the well of wisdom, but who speak in boastful, confident tones, as though they had drunk deeply," Dr. Maier said. "We have too many college instructors who deliberately and systematically devote themselves to making it hard for undergraduates to maintain their loyalty to their childhood faith. We have too many department heads in state schools and in governmentally subsidized private universities who ceremoniously parade their denial of God."

"We need make no apologies for our faith, as though Christianity were based on a third or fourth rate mentality and only a moron could accept the religion of Jesus Christ. Great teachers have been humble believers and world famous scientists have knelt in faith before the Cross. We need not go back to the nineteenth century to find men like Lister, Pasteur, Lord Kelvin and Michael Faraday, nor to that brilliant congress of British scientists in the last generation at which 617 members affirmed their conviction that 'it is impossible for the Word of God as written in the book of nature and God's written Word in the Holy Scriptures to contradict one another.'"

"In his great two-volume study of the religion of the scientists of the nineteenth century, Antoine Eymieu, the distinguished French psychologist reviewed the 432 outstanding personalities of the scientific world of this time and found that while sixteen professed atheism, 367 were believers. And in our day the complete compatibility of Christian faith with scientific achievement of the first order is illustrated by men like Howard Kelly of Johns Hopkins, one of America's greatest surgeons; the late Albert Wigand, renowned German botanist; Sir Ambrose Fleming, whose invention of the thermionic valve made modern radio possible; and Dr. Alexis Carrel, head of the Rockefeller Foundation for Medical Research."

"The Church does not ask science for endorsements of her position or demonstrations of her doctrines. She asks only that scientists, before pontificating on matters of religion, remember that science and religion operate on two different planes, with different objectives, different categories and different techniques for discovering truth."

"Nation's Fair" Their Objective

Mrs. Vincent Astor
Winthrop W. Aldrich

NEW YORK (Special).—Mrs. Vincent Astor, society leader and civic worker, has been appointed Chairman of a National Women's Advisory Committee for the New York World's Fair of 1939. Winthrop W. Aldrich, Chairman of the Chase National Bank, is heading the men's National Committee. Together they will enlist more than 10,000 committee workers in a nationwide campaign to arouse interest in and create support for the New York Fair. Grover Whalen, President of the Fair Corporation, has announced that State Chairmen will be named later and that every state will be brought into active participation in the New York Fair, making it truly national.

1939 World's Fair Has New Ideas About Amusement Features

NEW YORK, (Special).—"Only seeing will be believing," says President Grover Whalen of the New York World's Fair 1939 Corporation, as he tries to envision what the Fair is planning, more than two years in advance, in the way of facilities for recreation, entertainment and amusement.

Every man, woman and child in the United States, he says, has an interest in the 1939 Fair and to some degree or other has a part in the building of that Fair. The exposition, therefore, will surpass all previous fairs, not only in the demonstration of the wonders of the world or present-day life and in the projection of the World of Tomorrow, but also in providing the utmost variety of entertainment and amusement for every man, woman and child.

The entire world will be tapped for every amusement possibility. The tiresome mediocrity of stunts and side shows—the stock-in-trade relics of the amusement world of yesterday—will give way to a new and modern standard of excellence. The plan of the New York World's Fair has anticipated the requirements for entertainment and is making them a part of the general scheme of the Fair, rather than allowing them to spring up as an appendage or an afterthought. Even the tiny children will have a playground reserved exclusively for their own use.

Double Wedding

A simple but beautiful double wedding took place last Saturday afternoon at four o'clock in the First Presbyterian church in Joliet, with the pastor, the Rev. Arthur W. Hoffman officiating.

The contracting parties were, Miss Gladys Marie Eaton, niece of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Eaton of Joliet R. F. D. No. 1, who became the bride of Raymond Frank Lichtenwalter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Lichtenwalter of Manhattan and Miss Evelyn Verla Lichtenwalter, brother of Raymond Frank Lichtenwalter, who became the bride of LaVerne Wilkins Bettenhausen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Bettenhausen also of Manhattan. There were no attendants.

Albert Hindle presided at the organ before and during the ceremony and Wm. Mathews of Chicago sang, "Oh Promise Me", and "I Love You Truly".

Each bride came down a different aisle and was met by her bridegroom at the white carpeted steps arranged at the altar and together they ascended the steps to the altar.

The ushers were, Robert Eaton, Lester Lichtenwalter and Lloyd and LeRoy Bettenhausen, brothers of the bride couples.

Miss Eaton was gowned in dubonnet lace over satin, with a satin sash which tied in the back, while Miss Lichtenwalter was gowned in royal blue lace over stain with a sash of velvet. Both gowns were fashioned in the princess style with high waistlines and long, full skirts. Their hats which matched their gowns, were in the halo style of braided material with tulle crowns and shoulder length tulle veils. Each wore a corsage of gardenias and each carried a lace handkerchief.

Following the ceremony an informal reception for relatives and friends was held in the church parlors. Mr. and Mrs. Lichtenwalter, Mr. and Mrs. Bettenhausen, Mr. and Mrs. Eaton and Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Hoffman were in the receiving line.

Refreshments were served from three beautifully decorated tables. The largest one was decorated with a lace cloth over turquoise satin and ivory candles in candelabra, with the large wedding cake forming the centerpiece. Miss June Lichtenwalter, Miss Marilyn Eib, Miss Helen Reed and Mrs. Wm. Mathews poured. Others assisting were Miss Fanny and Margaret Meditz of Chicago; Miss Ione Klett and Miss Delores Gensch of Elwood; Miss Lillian Barton of Manhattan and Mrs. Ernest Eaton. Mr. Mathews sang a medley of love songs during the reception and he was accompanied by Mrs. Marvin Martin.

Miss Eaton was graduated from the Joliet township high school in 1930 and from the Wesley hospital, Evanston in 1933. Mr. Lichtenwalter graduated from the same high school in 1922 and later attended the University of Illinois. He is district manager of the Midwest Phosphate Co., of Joliet.

Miss Lichtenwalter was graduated from the Joliet township high school in 1932 and Mr. Bettenhausen was graduated with the same class. He is employed at the Ford Motor Co., at Hammond, Ind.

After the reception the couples left for a short honeymoon trip. Mrs. Bettenhausen wore a print dress with black accessories and a green fur trimmed coat and Mrs. Lichtenwalter wore a print dress with black accessories and a black wool coat with a shoulder cape of kolinsky fur.

They will be at home to their friends in apartments at 1325 North Shore avenue, in Chicago.

Out of town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Matthews, the Misses Meditz and Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Martin all of Chicago; Mrs. Mary Dobbs of Pontiac; Francis Reedy of Gray, Ind.; and Mr. and Mrs. O. G. Barrett and Mrs. John Sayres of Arlington Heights.

Outlook Justifies State Participation In New York Fair

Whalen Voices Opinion in Inviting Governor and People to the 1939 Exposition

NEW YORK, (Special).—In a letter of invitation to the governors of 47 states, Grover Whalen, President of the New York World's Fair 1939 Corporation, points out that the commercial consequences of the international exposition under construction in New York City are so great and important that they alone would justify the active participation of every state in the nation.

"Fifty million persons from every walk in life, from every state in the United States, from every country in the world, are expected to attend the Fair," writes Mr. Whalen. "The great American market with its tremendous consumer purchasing power will be represented by these visitors. They will comprise a true cross-section of America."

The World's Fair, according to Mr. Whalen, will be a magnificent spectacle, entertaining and instructive. It will attempt to answer the questions: "What kind of a world have we built? What kind of a world are we building? What kind of a world can we build?" With collateral improvements, it will represent a total investment of more than $125,000,000 by the Fair Corporation and the governmental, industrial and other participants. The Fair site park is a tract of 1216½ acres, almost at the geographical and population centre of New York City.

Construction of buildings and roads, grading, dredging, planting and landscaping are already under way, based upon a schedule which calls for completion of all construction operations before January 1, 1939, to allow four months for final decorations and installation of exhibits preparatory to the opening of the Fair on April 30.

The opening date commemorates the inauguration, on April 30, 1789, of George Washington as the first President of the United States.

In the government area, and near an imposing federal hall to be erected by the United States Government, the Fair will provide a "Hall of States" in which the significant contributions of each state in laying the foundations for the better World of Tomorrow can be proudly displayed, says Mr. Whalen.

His letter supplements an invitation to participate in the Fair extended to the governors on November 30 by Governor Herbert H. Lehman of the host state of New York. Governor Lehman pointed out that the State of New York has already appropriated, to date, $2,130,000 for commencement of construction of boulevards, service roads, bridges, and certain other basic improvements the State will make at the exposition site or its approaches. The New York legislature, further, during 1936 passed an act creating the New York World's Fair Commission of 18 members and providing funds in aid of this body's preparation of plans for a state building and exhibit and for active state participation in the Fair.

ILLINOIS
BREVITIES

Frederick Schaeble, seventy-seven years old, a native and lifelong resident of Port Byron and a blacksmith forty years, is dead.

Mrs. Emma Gibson and Miss Evelyn Sturtevant, twins, of Sterling, celebrated their eighty-seventh birthday recently.

Grant Minor, fifty years old, chief deputy sheriff and former sheriff of Peoria county, died of a heart attack at his home in Peoria.

Charles Meals and Eugene Williams, both of Tuscola, were killed at Montezuma, Ind., when their truck struck an abutment of a bridge.

Robert I. Hunt, United States subtreasurer in Chicago in the Wilson administration and long a prominent figure in Illinois Democratic circles, died from a heart attack in his home in Decatur.

Mrs. Gerepene Burke, eighty-eight, of Golconda, mourned the death of her twin sister, Miss Geraldine Hatton, from whom she had never been separated more than a week during the life time of the pair.

George F. Puffer, fifty-seven years old, president of the Aurora Bleachery and Dye works, died of pneumonia in his home in Aurora. He began his career in the textile industry at Lowell, Mass., his birthplace, and moved to Aurora thirty-four years ago.

S. L. Nudelman, acting state director of revenue, reported that collection of revenue from the 3 per cent Illinois retailers' occupation (sales) tax during 1936 amounted to $70,370,743. This brought to $174,710,518 the total collected in the state since the tax became effective on August 1, 1933.

Governor Horner began his second term with colorful ceremonies in the armory at Springfield. An immense crowd was present and there was a big parade. State Rep. Louie Louis, newly chosen speaker, presided over the inaugural. Administering of the oath fell to Chief Justice Lott Herrick.

Revocation of the license of Russell A. Trovillion, Belleville dentist, to practice dentistry was ordered by Director John J. Hallihan of the state department of registration and education. He is alleged to have violated the state dental practice act by advertising in newspapers as a corporation.

Dr. A. B. Culhane, receiver for the Rockford National bank, paid $4,000 for a strip of land averaging 3 inches in width upon which part of the south wall of the bank building now stands. Payment was made by the receiver in a move to clear the title of the bank property so the building may be sold.

William H. Malone, former chairman of the Illinois tax commission, was arraigned in Chicago before Federal Judge John P. Barnes on an indictment charging him with evading income taxes totaling $59,579 for the years 1929 and 1930. Formal preliminary motions were set down for hearing within thirty days and after they are disposed of a trial date will be set. First Assistant United States Attorney Warren Canaday said.

Charles J. Sachs, of Elmhurst, thirty-five years old, former proprietor of a number of home appliance stores in northern Illinois cities, was sentenced to serve from one to fourteen years in the Joliet penitentiary by Judge Frank W. Shepherd in the Kane county Circuit court at Geneva. After Sachs waived jury trial he was found guilty by the judge of swindling finance companies out of $35,000 by forging names of customers to duplicate contracts.

Fern Evett, president of subdistrict 9, United Mine Workers of America, was named at West Frankfort chairman of a committee to organize wagon trade coal mines in southern Illinois. Demands for a $7.50 a day minimum wage in the Illinois coal industry were approved at joint local union meeting attended by delegates from 25 local unions embracing a membership of 30,000 in the United Mine Workers. Counties represented were Franklin, Saline, Perry, and Jackson.

Eight Illinois residents were bequeathed shares in an estate valued at "over $20,000" under terms of the will of Catherine Hinck, filed for probate in New York. The will leaves Mrs. Lena Russell, a sister, and Herman Korte, a foster brother, both of Tuscola, Ill., one-third shares each. Five nephews will receive equal shares in the remainder. They are L. R. Vermillion of Tuscola, W. H. Vermillion of Oak Park, Gordon Vermillion and Geneva Nicholson of Arcola and Peter Vermillion of Chicago. A bequest of $3,000 went to a niece, Ollie Sievers of Arthur, Ill.

Dorothy Harper, thirteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Harper of Harrisburg, was kidnapped by an unidentified young man and was found unconscious on the floor of her home two hours later. Dr. N. A. Herrman said she had been attacked.

Dr. A. C. Keener, sixty-three, of Altoona, died at a hospital of head injuries received when he slipped and fell on the ice while making a call on a patient. Before entering medical school, Dr. Keener was superintendent of schools in Henderson county for a number of years.

FINANCIAL COST OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES

LESSON TEXT—Proverbs 21:17; 23:20, 21; Matthew 24:45-51; John 6:26, 27, 35.
GOLDEN TEXT—Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labor for that which satisfieth not? Isaiah 55:2.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Why a Servant Lost His Job.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Why a Servant Lost His Job.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Drink Really Costs in Dollars and Cents.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Alcoholic Beverages—a Financial Asset or Liability?

Temperance Sunday brings a greatly needed opportunity to consider the entire question of intoxicating liquors. When the prohibition amendment was under fire the proponents of repeal contended that it would reduce taxes, cut down unemployment, eliminate bootleg liquor, return men and women to temperate and decent habits. It is worthwhile noting that not a single one of these expected benefits has materialized.

Taxes on liquor have not reduced general taxes. After all, what decent American would want his taxes cut with "blood-money"? Bootlegging thrives more flagrantly than ever. Evasion of liquor taxes indicates that about half of America's liquor is "bootleg." The specter of unemployment still stalks the land. And are our people temperate? One could laugh if it were not so tragic! The consumption of liquor is fast becoming a national disgrace. And the tragedy is that Christians have for the most part supinely said "What can I do?" and have done nothing.

The repeal of prohibition was brought about by the indifference of American voters. The issue was finally settled by the votes of less than 23 per cent of the registered voters. Where were the other 77 per cent? Where are they now?

But our lesson goes deeper than the matter of intoxicating liquor. It deals with two contrasted modes of living. What a man is determines what he does. If he lives for the flesh he will pander to its tastes. If he lives in the Spirit he will not only be right in his attitude toward liquor but toward every phase of life, yes, even toward eating.

Let us consider these two ways of life—and weigh carefully our own life decision. In which way do I walk? Remember that one may live to the flesh even though he is not a winebibber. It is a matter of heart interest and relationship to God.

I. Living in the Flesh.
The word flesh in Scripture does not refer to our physical flesh and blood, except as it is dominated by self-will. But when self-will rules the body, and God's will is ruled out, a man lives in the flesh.

Our lesson gives a terrifying picture of such a life. It makes a man a senseless lover of pleasure for pleasure's sake (Prov. 21:17). He is a lover of wine, a glutton (Prov. 23:20, 21), careless (Matt. 24:48), disorderly and unfaithful (v. 49), and a professed follower of Christ because of what it brings him (John 6:26). His end even in this world is disgrace and poverty, and in the world to come, eternal judgment (Matt. 24:51).

II. Living in the Spirit.
"They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts" (Gal. 5:24). They are therefore admonished to "walk in the Spirit," that is, to submit their lives to the control and guidance of the Spirit of God. In other words seek God's will, not self-will.

What kind of men and women are those who live in "the spirit"? A re-reading of our lesson texts reveals them as, wise, faithful, diligent, temperate, not following the Lord because of any gain to themselves.

What is their reward? In this life they are entrusted with more work for their Master (Matt. 24:47). The reward for Christian work well done is more work. So if you are lazy, don't begin. But if the fires of holy ambition to serve him burn within your soul, go on, and he will lead you further on until at last in the world to come you will have the all-sufficient reward of his "Well done, good and faithful servant."

Brave Men

All brave men love; for he only is brave who has affections to fight for, whether in the daily battle of life or in physical contests.—Hawthorne.

Truth in Little Things

I have seldom known any one who deserted truth in trifles, that could be trusted in matters of importance.—Paley.

Pinnacle of Knowledge

The end of all learning is to know God, and out of that knowledge to love and imitate him.—Milton.

Acts of Charity

Washington.—Two messages to congress by the President have created more than the usual excitement attendant upon such things as the new session has settled down to its annual consideration of public affairs. In each of these were Presidential declarations that are beginning to reverberate and that means they are highly controversial.

Messages

In Mr. Roosevelt's annual message "on the state of the union," he took occasion to tell congress how much he appreciated its "co-operation" with him. He followed that bit of back patting with probably the boldest statement he has made since entering the White House four years ago for the first term. He called upon the Supreme Court of the United States, in a roundabout way to "co-operate" with the other two branches of the government, the legislative and executive.

The other wave of excitement, not to say disturbance, was caused by the President's special message asking congress for a wholesale reorganization of the executive departments and agencies—calling this proposal a plan for modernizing the government.

One can circulate through the corridors and offices of the Capitol and office buildings and hear mutterings aplenty and even a considerable bit of outspoken criticism by senators and representatives of the two circumstances I have mentioned. There are many members of the legislative branch who are entertaining a feeling that the demand for Supreme court co-operation was equivalent to carrying the ball out of bounds. But that part of the Presidential pronouncement is not likely, in the end, to produce the battle on the floor of the senate or house that will result from some phases of his "modernizing" program.

The fact is that our national government has become a structure, insofar as the executive agencies are concerned, that sprawls out like an octopus. About 75 per cent of these units and agencies are products of the New Deal recovery program; they work at cross purposes; they move in their own sphere and make their own policies with almost no direction from the White House. Certainly, the time is ripe to clean up that mess.

Yet, in cleaning up these conditions, in reorganizing, it is undoubtedly the consensus of those charged with responsibility for the job that common sense must be used and discretion employed or else untold damage will be done to the government and to the whole economic structure of the nation, including the taxpayers.

The Presidential reorganization program was sweeping in character and that is the reason why it has run into obstacles.

Reorganization Program
For example, the plan calls for placing the interstate commerce commission, the general accounting office, the federal trade commission and the civil service commission largely inside of old-established departments over which cabinet officers preside. Now, a cabinet officer is and always has been in the past a political appointee, an individual who had been active in promotion of a party campaign and usually one who has made important contributions of money to his party's campaign fund. So, it becomes plainly evident, I believe, that to place such agencies as those I have named in regular departments, is to place them completely under political domination.

Where it is good, therefore, to place strictly administrative agencies under cabinet control, it becomes equally dangerous to place under political domination such quasi-judicial agencies as the ICC and the general accounting office. There can be no doubt of that fact. That is the crux of the disturbance among the legislators under the reorganization proposal.

Those of us who have had long experience as writers and observers in Washington have seen evidence in almost every administration of attempts of politicians to get their fingers into the pie of railroad rate making. They have adopted all sorts of tricks; they have used subterfuges and they have employed strong political pressure time after time to gain control of railroad rate making. Through all of these years since the ICC was established, there has always been enough sane minds in congress who, with White House backing, could resist this political move. Naturally, therefore, it is a matter of some question why President Roosevelt should attempt to toss the interstate commerce commission and its rate making power straight into the laps of the politicians.

Of course, the Presidential message on this point appears on its face to provide against the end that I have mentioned but old timers in congress point out how this wedge, driven only a little further, will bring about political domination of the ICC.

It is hardly necessary here to set down all of the potential dangers that can emanate from political control of such a vast structure as the railroads of the United States. It is unlimited in its possibilities. Dangers are inherent in any program of that kind with which the politicians are identified and it appears to be a circumstance in which congress, if it is going to serve the people properly, should call a halt.

Potential

As to the general accounting office and the plan to include it in the Treasury again under the rule of an auditor general, the reorganization scheme simply will set control of public expenditures back a quarter of a century. One of the earlier Presidents made no effort to conceal the use that could be made of the auditing unit of the government when he said, on an occasion where the chief auditor ruled an expenditure illegal, that if it were not possible to change the ruling under the law, it still was possible to change the chief auditor.

I am not making a charge that the present administration desires to spend congressional appropriations illegally; but one cannot dodge the conversations that are taking place around the Capitol in which legislators recall how President Roosevelt criticized John R. Mc Carl when he was comptroller general for a decision that prevented use of public money in a manner desired by the President. To sum up this particular phase of the situation, one hardly need to say more than that if the auditor general is a subordinate of the Secretary of the Treasury, he is likely to take orders from the Secretary of the Treasury, whoever that Secretary may be. And, since the Secretary of the Treasury is an appointee of the President and serves only at the President's pleasure, in my mind a link is established whereby the White House again will control determination of legality and illegality of expenditures.

Congress created the general accounting office in order that it would have an agency independent of the Chief Executive and the executive departments to keep tab on how those executive agencies expended the money which congress appropriated. That was the reason why the office of comptroller general was made to carry a fifteen-year appointment with removal only for malfeasance or misfeasance. Now it is proposed to tear down that structure and bring the whole auditing organization under a cabinet officer.

But there is another phase to be considered. It has been my good fortune to be in Washington during the entire life of the general accounting office as well as for several years before. Of my own knowledge, I can say that the general accounting office has recovered millions of dollars of illegally disbursed funds as well as prevented illegal disbursement of other millions.

There seems to be more support for inclusion of the civil service commission in the form of a civil service administrator under an executive department than there is support for breaking up of the federal trade commission as the President proposed. Neither of these agencies has such an important bearing on the public as a whole as do the other two I have discussed. The plan to make the civil service administration subject to cabinet control was softened considerably by the President by inclusion of a proposal to make all government employees below policymaking grades subject to civil service laws. That is a big step forward, provided it is not a ruse to permit packing the lists with adherents of one political party or the other, whichever may be in power.

Civil

The federal trade commission, like the interstate commerce commission, is a quasi-judicial body. There has been objection to its present setup as prosecutor, judge and jury but many legislators believe this can be corrected without emasculating the agency and destroying its identity by putting it into an executive department. It ought to be free and independent and ought not to have any politician in a cabinet chair telling it what to do when it seeks to make business be honest.

"Garrison Finish"

"THAT was a garrison finish!" you exclaim when the home team, which has been trailing for most of the game, comes from behind to win in the last minute of play. And when you say that you are perpetuating the fame—not of a baseball or a football player, but of a jockey!

Edward H. Garrison was his name and he started life as a blacksmith's helper in New Haven, Conn. Then he began hanging around the racetracks and occasionally was given the job of exercising one of the thoroughbreds. It wasn't long until he was a full-fledged jockey, who made it a practice to hold his mounts in during the greater part of a race because he mistrusted the staying power of a "front runner." Then he began to boot and whip as they came down into the stretch where, as he said, "the money is."

In 1886 one of these "come-from-behind-to-win" drives carried an outsider, Dutch Roller, owned by James R. Keene, to victory in the Great Eastern handicap at Sheepshead Bay, N. Y., and after that a "Garrison finish" became a byword on the turf. But more famous than that was Garrison's victory on Boundless in the $60,000 World Fair derby in Chicago in 1893.

When the entries in this race went to the post, Garrison began to stall. On one pretext or another, such as fixing his straps and his saddle, he managed to delay the start of the race for an hour and 42 minutes! He spent most of this time on the ground, thus taking the weight off his horse, while the other horses were fidgeting and wearing themselves out under the weight of their riders.

When at last they were sent away to the excited cheers of 100,000 spectators, Boundless' jockey trailed the field for almost the entire race. Then there was another "Garrison finish" and Boundless, a 15 to 1 shot, came home the winner of $60,000—or rather $59,000 for the judges fined Garrison $1,000 for his part in the delay at the post.

"Snapper" won, lost and partly regained a fortune in racing. He quit as a jockey in 1897 and later served as an official at numerous tracks in the South. His last days were spent in Florida where he died a few years ago at the age of sixty-two.

John Smith T.

HIS name was John T. Smith. But that was too common. So, in order to make people remember his name he began signing it "John Smith T." As such it has come down in history, albeit the figure of the man who bore it is a shadowy one. We know that he was famous in the early days of Missouri as a duelist and land speculator and that he caused considerable trouble for Moses Austin before that worthy went to the Southwest to play an important role in the history of the Republic of Texas.

Historians are beginning to suspect that John Smith T. was deeply involved in the Burr conspiracy, as was another John Smith—a United States senator from Ohio who missed being expelled from the senate by just one vote. But how prominent John Smith T. was in that misguided adventure is still unknown and he is remembered chiefly because he was uniquely successful in escaping oblivion when "Fate tried to conceal him by naming him Smith!"

At least four others who attempted to thwart Fate thus are recorded in the rolls of the United States army. J. Allen Smith of Pennsylvania changed his name to J. A. S. Izard when he entered the United States Military academy at West Point but when he was graduated in 1825 he resumed his real name. One of his classmates was Joseph Brice Smith, who was graduated as Joseph S. Bryce, became a second lieutenant and resigned from the army in 1832. At the outbreak of the Civil war he became a captain of volunteers and in 1865 was brevetted a major for gallantry during the war. In 1830 a William Smith entered West Point as "William D. Fraser" but he was graduated under his right name. He rose to a captaincy and was brevetted a major in 1848 for "meritorious service" during the Mexican war.

The fourth Smith who changed his name rose the highest in military life. He was Morgan Lewis Smith, who for some unknown reason enlisted in the army in 1845 under the name of Martin L. Sanford and served as private, corporal and sergeant during the next five years. The outbreak of the Civil war found him using his real name again. He became colonel of the Eighth Missouri infantry in 1861 and was made a brigadier-general of volunteers in 1862, holding that rank until he resigned in 1865.

Hatred in the East

The hatred between peoples in the East and the Near East is only equalled in war-time Europe and often takes amusing turns. The Kurds and the Assyrians never got along together and if the Kurds address their dogs in the language of the Assyrians, the Assyrians speak to theirs in Kurdish.

The Garden Murder Case

by S. S. VAN DINE

Copyright S. S. Van Dine
WNU Service

SYNOPSIS

Philo Vance, famous detective, and John F. X. Markham, district attorney for New York county are dining in Vance's apartment when Vance receives an anonymous telephone message informing him of a "disturbing psychological tension at Professor Ephraim Garden's apartment" advising that he read up on radio-active sodium, consult a passage in the Aeneid and counseling that "Equanimity is essential." Professor Garden is famous in chemical research. The message, decoded by Vance, reminds him that Professor Garden's son Floyd and his puny cousin, Woody Swift, are addicted to horse-racing. Vance says that "Equanimity" is a horse running next day in the Rivermont handicap. Vance is convinced that the message was sent by Dr. Siefert, the Gardens' family physician. He arranges to have lunch next day at the Gardens' penthouse. Vance is greeted by Floyd Garden and meets Love Hamme, an elderly follower of horse racing. Floyd expresses concern over Swift's queer actions. Mrs. Garden, supposedly ill, comes downstairs and places a $100 bet on a horse.

"Right-o, Baby - face," grinned Garden. "Step into our parlor."

She started forward, and hesitated momentarily as she caught sight of Vance and me.

"Oh, by the way, Zalia,"—Garden put the receiver down and rose—"let me present Mr. Vance and Mr. Van Dine . . . Miss Graem."

The girl staggered back dramatically and lifted her hands to her head in mock panic.

"Oh, Heaven protect me!" she exclaimed. "Philo Vance, the detective! Is this a raid?"

Vance bowed graciously.

"Have no fear, Miss Graem," he smiled. "I'm merely a fellow criminal. And, as you see, I'm dragging Mr. Van Dine along the downward path with me."

At this moment Garden pressed forward the key on the switch box, and in a moment the voice we had heard earlier was again coming through the amplifier.

"Coming out at Rivermont, and here's the new line: 20, 6, 4, 8 to 5 scratch twice, 3, 20, 15, 10, 15 . . . Who was it wanted the run-down at Texas?"

Garden cut the amplifier.

He turned to his cousin. "And you, Woody?"

Swift shook his head. "Not this race."

"Saving it all for Equanimity, eh? Right-o."

Despite the superficial buoyancy of the gathering, I could detect an undercurrent of extreme tension and expectancy; and I made mental note of various little occurrences during the first hour or so.

One incident connected with Swift puzzled me greatly. I had noticed that he and Zalia Graem had not spoken to each other during the entire time they had been in the drawing-room. Once they had brushed against each other near Garden's table, and each, as if instinctively, had drawn resentfully to one side. Garden had cocked his head at them irritably and said:

"Aren't you two on speaking terms yet—or is this feud to be permanent? . . . Why don't you kiss and make up and let the gaiety of the party be unanimous?"

Miss Graem had proceeded as if nothing had happened, and Swift had merely given his cousin a quick, indignant glance.

CHAPTER III

"The great moment approaches!" Garden announced, and though he spoke with sententious gaiety, I could detect signs of strain in his manner.

Kroon rose, finished the drink which stood on the table before him, and dabbing his mouth with a neatly folded handkerchief which he took from his breast pocket, he moved toward the archway.

"My mind was made up yesterday," he spoke across the room, as if including every one. "Put me down in your fateful little book for $100 on Hyjinx to win and $200 on the same filly to place. And you can add $200 on Head Start to show. Making it, all told, half a grand. That's my contribution to the afternoon's festivities."

"Not deserting us, are you Cecil?" Garden called after him.

"Frightfully sorry," Kroon answered, looking back. "I'd love to stay for the race, but a legal conference at a maiden aunt's is scheduled for 4:30." He waved his hand and, with a "Cheerio," continued down the hall.

Madge Weatherby immediately picked up her cards and moved to Zalia Graem's table, where the two women began a low, whispered conversation.

Garden's inquiring glance moved from one to another of the party.

At this moment a young woman of unusual attractiveness appeared in the archway and stood there hesitantly, looking shyly at Garden. She wore a nurse's uniform of immaculate white, with white shoes and stockings, and a starched white cap set at a grotesque angle on the back of her head. She could not have been over thirty; yet there was a maturity in her calm, brown eyes, and evidence of great capability in the reserve of her expression and in the firm contour of her chin. She wore no make-up, and her chestnut hair was parted in the middle and brushed back simply over her ears. She presented a striking contrast to the two other women in the room. "Hello, Miss Beeton," Garden greeted her pleasantly. "I thought you'd be having the afternoon off, since the mater's well enough to go shopping . . . What can I do for you? Care to join the madhouse and hear the races?"

"Oh, no. I've too many things to do." She moved her head slightly to indicate the rear of the house. "But if you don't mind, Mr. Garden," she added timidly, "I would like to bet two dollars on Azure Star to win, and to come in second, and to come in third."

Every one smiled covertly, and Garden chuckled.

Vance, who had been watching the girl with more interest than he usually showed in a woman, leaned forward.

"I say, Garden, just a moment." He spoke incisively. "I think Miss Beeton's choice is an excellent one—however she may have arrived at it." Then he nodded to the nurse. "Miss Beeton, I'll be very happy to see that your bet on Azure Star is placed." He turned again to Garden. "Will your book-maker take $200 across the board on Azure Star?"

"Will he? He'll grab it with both hands," Garden replied. "But why—?"

"Then it's settled," said Vance quickly. "That's my bet. And two dollars of it in each position belongs to Miss Beeton."

The Two Women Began a Low, Whispered Conversation.

"That's perfect with me, Vance." And Garden jotted down the wager in his ledger.

I noticed that during the brief moments that Vance was speaking to the nurse and placing his wager on Azure Star, Swift was glowering at him through half-closed eyes. It was not until later that I understood the significance of that look.

The nurse cast a quick glance at Swift, and then spoke with simple directness.

"You are very kind, Mr. Vance." Then she added: "I will not pretend I don't know who you are, even if Mr. Garden had not called you by name." She stood looking straight at Vance with calm appraisal; then she turned and went back down the hall.

Swift stood up and walked to the cabinet with its array of bottles. He filled a whiskey glass with Bourbon and drank it down. Then he walked slowly to the table where his cousin sat. Garden had just finished the call to Hannix.

"I'll give you my bet now, Floyd," Swift said hoarsely. He pressed one finger on the table, as if for emphasis. "I want $10,000 on Equanimity to win."

Garden's eyes moved anxiously to the other.

"I was afraid of that, Woody," he said in a troubled tone. "But if I were you—"

"I'm not asking you for advice," Swift interrupted in a cold steady voice; "I'm asking you to place a bet."

Garden did not take his eyes from the man's face. He said merely: "I think you're a damned fool." "Your opinion of me doesn't interest me either," Swift's eyelids drooped menacingly, and a hard look came into his set face.

Garden capitulated. "It's your funeral," he said, and turning his back on his cousin, he took up the gray hand set again and spun the dial with determination.

Swift walked back to the bar and poured himself another generous drink of Bourbon.

"Hello, Hannix," Garden said into the transmitter. "I'm back again, with an additional bet. Hold on to your chair or you'll lose your balance. I want ten grand on Equanimity to win . . . Yes, that's what I said: ten G-strings—ten thousand iron men. Can you handle it? Odds probably won't be over two to one . . . Right-o."

He replaced the receiver and tilted back in his chair just as Swift, headed for the hall, was passing him.

Garden, apparently deeply perturbed, kept his eyes on the retreating figure. Then, as if on sudden impulse, he stood up quickly and called out: "Just a minute, Woody. I want to say a word to you." And he stepped after him.

I saw Garden put his arm around Swift's shoulder as the two disappeared down the hall.

When Garden returned to the room his face was a trifle pale, and his eyes were downcast. As he approached our table he shook his head dejectedly.

"I tried to argue with him," he remarked to Vance. "But it was no use; he wouldn't listen to reason. He turned nasty . . . Poor devil! If Equanimity doesn't come in he's done for." He looked directly at Vance. "I wonder if I did the right thing in placing that bet for him. But, after all, he's of age."

A bell rang somewhere in the apartment, and a few moments later Sneed appeared in the archway.

"Pardon me, sir," he said to Garden, "but Miss Graem is wanted on the other telephone."

Zalia Graem stood up quickly and raised one hand to her forehead in a gesture of dismay.

"Who on earth or in the waters under the earth can that be?" Her face cleared. "Oh, I know." Then she stepped up to Sneed. "I'll take the call in the den." And she hurried from the room.

Garden a few moments later turned in his chair and announced: "They're coming out at Rivermont. Say your prayers, children . . ."

As the radio tubes warmed up, McElroy's well-known voice gained in volume over the loud speaker: " . . . and Equanimity is now making trouble at the post. Took the cue from Head Start . . . Now they're both back in their stalls—it looks as if we might get a—Yes! They're off! And to a good even start. Hyjinx has dashed into the lead; Azure Star comes next; and Heat Lightning is close behind. The others are bunched. I can't tell one from the other yet. Wait a second. Here they come past us—and it's Hyjinx on top now, by two lengths; and behind her is Train Time; and—yes, it's Sublimite, by a head, or a nose, or a neck—it doesn't matter—it's Sublimite anyway. And there's Risky Lad creeping up on Sublimite . . . And now they're going round the fist turn, with Hyjinx still in the lead. The relative positions of the ones out front haven't changed yet . . . They're in the back stretch, and Hyjinx is still ahead by half a length; Train Time has moved up and holds his second position by a length and a half ahead of Roving Flirt, who's in third place. Azure Star is a length behind Roving Flirt. Equanimity is pocketed."

At this point in the broadcast Zalia Graem appeared suddenly in the archway and stood with her eyes fixed on the radio, her hands sunk in the pockets of her tailored jacket.

" . . . They're rounding the far turn. Equanimity has improved his position and is getting into his famous stride. Hyjinx has dropped back and Roving Flirt has taken the lead by a head, with Train Time second, by a length, in front of Azure Star, who is running third and making a grand effort . . . And now they're in the stretch. Azure Star has come to the front and is a full length in the lead. Train Time is making a great bid for this classic and is still in second place, a length behind Azure Star. Roving Flirt is right behind him. Hyjinx has dropped back and it looks as if she was no longer a serious contender. Equanimity is pressing hard and is now in sixth place. He hasn't much time, but he's running a beautiful race and may come up front yet. . . . And here they come to the finish. The leaders are straight out—there won't be much change. Just a second. Here they come . . . and . . . the winner is Azure Star by two lengths. Next is Roving Flirt. And a length behind him is Train Time. Upper Shelf finished fourth . . ."

"Not such a hot race," Miss Graem remarked with a toss of her head. "I'll just about break even . . . Now I'll go and finish my phone call." And she turned back down the hall.

Garden seemed ill at ease and, for the second time that afternoon, mixed himself a highball.

Just then Mrs. Garden bustled into the room.

"Don't tell me I'm too late!" she pleaded excitedly.

"All over but the O. K., mater," Garden informed her.

"And what did I do?" The woman came forward and dropped wearily into an empty chair.

"The usual," grinned Garden. "A Grand Score? Your noble steed didn't score at all. Condolences. But it's not official yet. We'll be getting the O. K. in a minute now." "Oh, dear!" sighed Mrs. Garden despondently.

"Well," said Garden, "Mr. Vance, the eminent dopest of crimes and ponies, can now take a luxurious vacation. He's the possessor of thirty-six hundred and forty dollars—of which thirty-six dollars and forty cents goes to our dear nurse . . . And Woode, of course . . ."

His voice trailed off.

"What did Woody do?" demanded Mrs. Garden, sitting up stiffly in her chair.

"I'm frightfully sorry, mater,"—her son groined for words—"but Woody didn't use his head. I tried to dissuade him, but it was no go . . ."

"Well, what did Woody do?" persisted Mrs. Garden.

Garden hesitated, and before he could formulate an answer, a paralyzing sound, like a pistol shot, broke the tense silence.

Bob Davis Reveals

Greatest Adventurer Is Unaware of Right to Title.

NEVER in history has there been a lack of courageous men; at least, never a shortage of intrepid souls who were willing to break a lance with fate. Theirs are the sagas that survive the ages, to be told where-ever men congregate to swap tales of danger and daring.

Years ago, New York boasted an Adventurers' club. Those who had come to grips with life and lived to tell the tale asked nothing more than a few listeners. When a man held the floor he had his say to the end and none took exception to the form or content of his narrative. One night the chairman, in this case Arthur Sullivan Hoffman, invited those present to relate dramatic chapters from their own experience.

Robert Ritchie, a visiting international journalist, called upon to contribute a yarn, had this to say: "Adventure is not necessarily based upon thrilling eventualities. What is adventure to one man may be deadly monotony to another. It resolves itself into a point of view. The greatest adventurer I ever knew was quite unaware of his right to claim such title, and yet, when one takes into consideration the details of his magnificent intrepidity, nothing, in my opinion, compares. His name was Hermann Bland; dead or alive today who knows. I met him on a steamer out of Liverpool, en route to India via the Mediterranean, through the Suez and down the Red sea. Small, wizened and retiring was this man, difficult of approach and, despite my persistent efforts at ice breaking, hard to crack. Not until the second week out did he evince the slightest inclination to fraternize. I had gone out of my way to break through the crust of his retreat. His surrender was complete. This was his story: Born in Hamburg of an English mother and German father, he came to England with his parents, shopkeepers, provisioners, I believe, and got a fairly good education, excelling in draftsmanship, which led to map making.

Fate Tricks Hermann Bland. "At twenty - eight, Bland, orphaned, but reasonably prosperous, married a Welsh girl, who died without issue after twelve years of married life, leaving her husband a parcel of real estate in Cardiff. Twenty years of uneventful life for the map maker followed. Bland, now sixty, with a snug deposit in a savings bank, to which he added 5,800 pounds, by the sale of the Cardiff property, making 11,000 pounds for a grand total, resigned from the map making establishment and made preparations to see some of the world that he had been charting on paper for thirty-two years. Where to go? Why not leave it to chance? That would be an idea worth trying. Fate should decide for him, and in the dark. So, Hermann repaired to his sitting room, switched off the light and groped his way to the center table, upon which lay an atlas. Opening the book at random, he stuck a pin haphazard into the page under his hand. Light! Which way now? The gleaming pin stood upright in the vitals of a small lumber town in northern Michigan. Well, if that was destiny's plan, Hermann Bland would let it ride.

"Within a fortnight, lugging two Gladstone bags and a Burberry duster, Hermann landed in the lumber town, took a room in a depot hotel, and for a period of one month, with never a complaint upon his lips, stayed on at this capital of vast inconvenience, sweltering heat and boredom.

"Three years elapsed before this tourist - minded man took another shot with a pin at the atlas. This time, again in the Stygian dark, he perforated the town of Irkutsk, Siberia, into which, with a trunk and a heavy ulster, he plunged by the shortest possible route. One week was enough.

Patience Rewards Traveler.

"And now, gentlemen of the Adventurers' club," said Ritchie, glancing at Hoffman and steadying his voice, "I have brought you to Hermann Bland's third trip out of London in search of the great adventure, which he alone possessed the vision to perceive. 'My friend,' said he to me as we emerged from the Red sea, 'I have given you the Michigan, and my trip to Siberia, the memory of which kept me in England for five years before I decided to resume my travels. This time, still in the darkness, I used a map of the world, turning my face toward the east. Long did I delay, fearing lest destiny desert me for the third time. Finally, with high hopes that the hour had come for me to plant the point, I did so with a firm hand, and then, confidence restored, with faith at high pitch, I turned on the light. Behold! There in India, my pin, on a blue field stood like a sentinel in the very heart of the Vale of Kashmir."

Preferred to the Costliest Shortenings

● The Vegetable Fat in Jewel is given remarkable shortening properties by Swift's special blending of it with other bland cooking fats. By actual test, Jewel Special-Blend makes lighter, more tender baked foods, and creams faster than the costliest types of plain all-vegetable shortening.

MANY LETTERS

Addressed to You Personally

THINK of the advertisements in this paper as so many letters addressed to you personally. That's what they're intended to be, and, actually, that's what they are. This newspaper is, in effect, a mail-bag which brings you news of events and news of the best merchandise at the fairest prices.

You don't throw away letters unread. You don't read three or four letters carefully and skim through the rest. Treat the "merchandise letters" in this newspaper the same way. Read them all. Read them carefully. One single item will often repay you for the time it has taken to read them all.

Many good housekeepers have formed the habit of reading their newspaper with a pencil and paper, ready to jot down the articles they wish to look at when they start out on their shopping tour. Try this method. It saves time, and saves money, and provides you with the pick of the day's merchandise.

EVERY ADVERTISEMENT HAS A MESSAGE ALL ITS OWN

Owners Old Style 2 Flat Buildings To Pay 75 pr. ct. of Tax

Owners of approximately 48,000 old style two flat buildings in Cook County have been called upon by Assessor John S. Clark to pay only 75 per cent of their taxes on or before February 1st.

This request was made by the assessor, who hastened to explain not to contribute toward Cook County's tax delinquency, but to give the property owners an opportunity to benefit by an assessment revision for which they cannot qualify if they pay their taxes in full.

"Cooperating as I am with the campaign to bring about payment of back taxes, I hesitate to advise property owners to hold up payment of their taxes," the assessor said, "but justice must be served and I am confident that, in giving this counsel to a comparatively small group of taxpayers whose position is unique, I will not be misunderstood."

Several weeks ago, the assessor recalled, he announced that owners of bay window type brick flat buildings, 20 years or older, were entitled to an assessment reduction of from $5 to $15. This cut was ordered due to a change in assessment methods. As rapidly as possible the revised assessments have been furnished to the county collector, who sends out the tax bills. But, due to the pressure of work in the assessor's office, and in the board of appeals, the county collector cannot be advised of the changes in the case of all the 48,000 owners before Feb. 1, the penalty date for payment of the 2nd installment of 1935 real estate taxes.

The assessor emphasized that the owners of 2 flat buildings not of the type officially termed 11 AB brick, are not entitled to the reduction and should pay their bills promptly.

Why We Need A Balanced Budget

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

The American people have recently heard from Washington a statement which they can greet with a whole-hearted welcome.

It is the assurance that a Balanced Budget is actually in sight.

There are difficulties in the way, of course—but every citizen with the welfare of the nation at heart will hope that these will be surmounted.

Why?

Because a Balanced Budget means far more than a matter of bookkeeping routine.

It can offer to government the benefits—which every wage-earner and housewife understands—of living within its income.

It can lessen the dangers—which every farmer and business man recognizes—of mortgaging the future through reckless accumulation of debts to be paid out of earnings in the years to come.

But it can do still more.

It can bring a revival of that confidence which alone will speed up America's latent capacity for production and consumption—a primary requisite for widespread re-employment.

To Congress the job may seem a hard one. But the course has been charted. It demands definite steps toward economy in government—involving the paring-down of swollen political payrolls, reduction of overlapping bureaus, insistence on a dollar's worth of value for every dollar spent from public funds; and emphasis on efficiency rather than extravagance in the administration of relief.

All these policies are of great value in themselves. And if a sincere adherence to them on the part of Congress can bring a Balanced Budget, their value will be multiplied.

Tinley PTA To Put On Interesting Program Feb. 5

Attention is called to the splendid program in store at the Parent Teacher's Founder's Day meeting, Friday February 5th at 2:00 p. m., in the Tinley Park school.

The celebration of Founder's Day our 40th anniversary, brings to Parent Teacher's associations, and to individual members, a three fold challenge; to understand the past, to evaluate the present and to face the future. With these thoughts in mind a humorous skit will be presented entitled "Delegates Convene."

We are grateful for the interest, helpfulness and activity accorded us and welcome to our association any one who is interested in children.

"We're counting on you To help us renew Acquaintance for old time's sake. So think of a few Invite them with you To partake of our birthday cake."

The mothers of children in Mrs. Hesbol's room are sponsoring a bake sale and solicit your patronage. The Visual Education chairman has arranged for a movie to be shown in the school auditorium Fri., January 29 at 10:00 a. m.

Through the efforts of our library chairman, library books may be secured by the public, at the school as follows:

Monday, Wednesday and Friday: from one to six p. m.

Tuesday and Thursday: from 3 to 8 p. m.

Green Garden Couple Married Sun.

Miss Lillie Wischover daughter of Mrs. John Wischover of Green Garden and Ervin Wagner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Wagner also of Green Garden were united in marriage Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the St. Peter Evangelical church in Green Garden with the pastor the Rev. Paul Reichert officiating.

Miss Lillie Wischover, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor and Melvin Albers, cousin of the groom acted as best man. Richard Albers, also cousin of the groom served as usher.

Miss Florence Harnack presided at the organ and Marjorie Nieland sang, "I Love You Truly" and "Loves Old Sweet Song."

The bride entered the church on the arm of her brother who gave her in marriage. She was dressed in a floor length gown of white satin, trimmed with pearls and wore a long veil and carried an arm bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor was dressed in a peach colored rayon satin, trimmed with pearls and carried an arm bouquet of peach color roses.

A wedding supper was served in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Wagner at five thirty o'clock where forty-one relatives of the bride and groom were guests.

The young couple will make their home on the Theo. Wagner farm.
